Industry Award for Ultrafab

Leinfelden-Echterdingen / Orlando — The U.S.-based company Ultrafab, Inc. is the North American market leader in weather seals and an internationally recognized manufacturer of modern sealing systems. Since 2023, the company has been part of Roto Frank Window and Door Technology. Now, the U.S. industry association Fenestration and Glazing Industry Alliance (FGIA) has honored Ultrafab with an award for 50 years of distinguished service.

Product standards provide security

The FGIA serves as a hub for exchanging technologies that advance the quality and manufacturing of windows and doors in North America. Various working groups are organized within the FGIA, one of which is tasked with continuously adapting the standards for window seals to new developments. Ultrafab's experts have been actively involved in this group for decades.

Ultrafab's sealing systems meet or exceed the requirements of the highest category, "A," of the Standard 701 for pile weather seals and Standard 702 for extruded seals. Through its high-quality products and commitment to defining and further developing industry standards, Ultrafab provides valuable service to the industry.

Reliability matters

Marcus Sander, CEO of Roto Window and Door Technology, supports active involvement in key industry committees: "Our experts worldwide are committed to ensuring that essential components for windows and doors are tested and quality-relevant requirements are defined. The hardware and sealing technology of Roto, Ultrafab, and Deventer naturally meet global quality standards, enabling the cost-efficient production of durable windows and doors. That is why our products are the 'Perfect Match' for window and door manufacturers."
